Did you know...our local creeks and waterways are polluted with fecal bacteria levels that exceed clean water standards?

Pet waste is a major source of this bacteria!

When it rains, stormwater runoff carries pollution such as pet waste, fertilizer, motor oil, and litter straight to the nearest creek, which eventually drains into the Cape Fear River and Atlantic Ocean.

Pet waste pollutes our environment and endangers your health:

- Humans can contract diseases and infections like salmonella, e.coli, giardia, and toxoplasmosis from bacteria and viruses contained in pet waste.
- Pet waste bacteria results in local waterways being closed for swimming, fishing, shellfishing and drinking.
- Pet waste also contains high levels of nutrients that cause toxic algal blooms and aquatic weeds, which use up oxygen in water. This can kill fish and other aquatic life.
- It's also gross to step in pet waste. You can track bacteria into your house on the bottom of your shoes.
- Make a difference - your neighbors, waterways and shoes will thank you!

Tips for Cleaning up after Fido

It's your Doody!

- 🐾 Always clean up after my pet, even in my own backyard
- 🐾 Always carry a bag or pooper scooper
- 🐾 Always dispose of pet waste properly by either:
 - Bagging, then placing in a closed trash can
 - Burying in a hole at least 6" deep - away from storm drains, ditches, waterways, gardens, and wells
 - Using a pet waste digester
 - Not flushing pet waste down the toilet
(Cape Fear Public Utility Authority ordinance)
- 🐾 Encourage other pet owners to be responsible too
